Old Time Resident of Marcellus Passes Peacefully Away

The death of Isaac Bradley occurred at his home on Cherry Street (South Street) early Monday morning, November 21, 1904. He had been in failing health for some time, never having fully rallied from an attack of sickness which he had last spring. He is survived by two daughters, Miss Sarah M. Bradley of Marcellus and Mrs. Peterson E Jones of Syracuse, and three grandchildren, Lue Bradley, Bradley F. and Grace Elizabeth Jones; also by Professor George L. Ammerman, Ph.D. of Yale University, who at the age eighteen months, on the death his mother became a member of Mr. Bradley's family and has always made his home there.

The funeral was held the home on Wednesday, November 23, at 2:30 p.m., and was conducted by his pastor, Rev. A.K. Macnaughton. The Rev. Dwight Scovel of Clinton a former pastor and

Rev. George Bayless of Syracuse were present at the funeral. Mr. Scovel assisting in the services at the house. Interment was made in the village cemetery.

We give in full the address made by Mr. Macnaughton at the funeral. "Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you."

I have chosen this text because of its appropriateness to the occasion, and because it is a text which was precious to the deceased and was of ten quoted by him. I do not purpose to preach a sermon today. We have come to bury the oldest resident of the town, one whose whole life has been spent here and who for many years was one of the prominent men in the community. The circumstances call for an historical address. I wish therefore to notice some of the principal events in Mr. Bradley's life and speak of a few of the many excellent traits in his character which made his life of rare beauty and strength.

Isaac Bradley was born January 19, 1817, in Marcellus, in the house now owned by Miss Anna Platt. He was the son of Honorable Dan Bradley, one of the pioneer settlers of the town, who was a native of Haddam, Connecticut, and came to Marcellus in September, 1795. Mr. Bradley's early life was spent in the home of his parents. His education was received from his father who was a graduate of Yale college. In November, 1832, Mr. Bradley became a clerk in the store of John White on the corner of Water and Warren streets, near the present Bastable block, Syracuse. He was afterward a clerk with Sanford S. Bartlett and Company in Auburn. In 1839 he started in the mercantile business in Marcellus in the store on the corner of Main and Cherry streets now occupied by F. A. Thompson; four years later moved to the store which he erected for himself and which is now occupied by James E. Woodbridge. He was later in partnership with the late W.J. Machan under the firm name of Machan and Bradley. In 1854 he entered the insurance business, in which he continued for forty years, until in 1894 failing health compelled him to retire from active business.

By the foregoing brief statement it will be seen that for a period of over fifty-five years, Mr. Bradley was closely and prominently identified with the business life of the town. With the exception of the years as a clerk in Syracuse and Auburn his whole life has been spent in Marcellus. In his death Marcellus loses its oldest resident and the last group of men who were prominent in the basin as life of the place forty years ago.

On February 2, 1842, Mr. Bradley married Mary Bosworth Thompson, of Skaneateles, a union which continued over sixty years. Mrs. Bradley died on March 22, 1902, a little more than a month after the sixtieth anniversary of their marriage.

Mr. Bradley came from good New England ancestry. His father graduated at Yale university with distinguished Academic honors received his Master's degree in 1789 at the age of twenty-three. Three years later, in 1792, he was ordained at Haddam, Connecticut, to the pastoral charge of Whitestown, now New Hartford, New York. In September, 1795, he came to Marcellus. The country was then a wilderness. Only a few scattered settlers were in what is now Onondaga county. Here Dan Bradley, afterwards known as Judge Bradley, engaged in farming. He soon became known. His cultural and refinement, his exalted view of life and his business ability made him a king among men. In 1801 he was appointed a judge of county courts, and in 1808 he became first judge of the county.

In this home of culture and refinement Isaac Bradley was born. The influence and surroundings of early life were favorable. The beginning of life was properly moulded and the character thus formed continued to grow and develop and become more and more beautiful to the end, and I believe is now more completely glorified in the presence of the redeemed with Christ in the Heavenly world. I have spoken of the father and the home to show the influence of early training right views of live. An older son of Judge Bradley, Dan Bradley, Jr., after graduating from the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York City, went in 1835 as a missionary to Siam, where he was instrumental in laying the foundations and beginning the a work which has in later years been yielding abundant harvest for the Master. His descendants are associated with and greatly interested in the missionary work in that field. Isaac Bradley, whose memory we honor today, early inclined to a business career. He had remarkable ability for business and was successful in the highest sense of the word. He established for himself a reputation for honesty, integrity and promptness, which won for him the confidence of all who knew him. He was a good financier. He possessed ability in this direction, which, were not for his impaired hearing, would have given him prominence in the commercial world. His books were perfectly kept. His statements were always accurate, He made friends, and having gained them he kept them. This was illustrated in his long service in the insurance business. Those who did business with him knew their interests would be attended to as faithfully as if they were his own.

Mr. Bradley was a man of keen intellect and inquiring mind. He was not satisfied with superficial knowledge, but solved problems to his own satisfaction. He sought to understand final causes. He craved knowledge and delighted in every new discovery of scientific truth. He was a man of more than ordinary literary ability. Had he given his life to literary work he would excelled in it. In conversation his language was choice, and his sentences were as carefully formed as if they were intended for the press. His many letters published time to time in the local paper and in the Syracuse dailies display marked literary ability. He had cultivated a remarkable memory, perhaps no better or more accurate authority than he on historical matters of the town. He formed the habit of continually refreshing his memory by verifying the facts that he had stored in his mind. He associated events and made the memory of one recall another. I found in a acquaintanceship of over seven years, in which for various purposes I have given some time to study the history of the town and county, that knowledge gotten from Mr. Bradley has on further examination have found to be, almost without exception of statement, in agreement with the most approved history. For many years Mr. Bradley's physical health has been far from robust. For over forty years his hearing has been greatly impaired, and had been gradually growing worse until it was with greatest difficulty that his friends made him hear anything.

Isaac Bradley

His eyesight failed rapidly during the last eight or ten years, so that perhaps for six or seven years has not been able to read any, nor write very much. But his mind continued clear and active to the very end. Not more than three weeks ago I had a very pleasant visit with him. It seemed to me then that his mind was exceedingly clear and active. He spoke interestingly and with great clearness on many topics. Mr. Bradley took great interest in church work and in the religious movements of the community. His father was one of the founders of the Presbyterian church of this place. Perhaps he might be called the founder, the chief spirit in its organization. His brother, Dan Bradley, I referred to as having helped lay the foundation of the Christian church of Siam. Isaac Bradley was very closely identified with the church life of the community. He was the friend of the Christian minister. His home was open for the entertainment of ministers who from time to time supplied the pulpit. He was always in his pew in the church on the Lord's day, until within the last eight or ten years, when failing health prevented his attendance on any public service. He went to church as long as he went anywhere. He regularly attended church for twenty-five or thirty years during which he was unable to hear a word the minister said either in prayer or sermon. He went for the sake of example and for the influence his going would have on others who might be very ready to frame an excuse for not attending. He was for about thirty years a very efficient member of the board of trustees, and was during his long life of intimate association with the affairs of the church, one of its most liberal financial supporters. The last church service he was privileged to enjoy was on the first Sunday of April, 1902, soon after the death of Mrs. Bradley, when at the close of the communion at the church, the session and about half a dozen friends came to the house and held a most delightful communion for him and us. On his eightieth birthday Mr. Bradley wrote these words: I am eighty years old today. I cannot but express my gratitude to God that he spared me to attain to such an advance age. If it is the Divine will to hold my life in reserve a little longer or not to do so, 'not my will but thine O Lord be done'. On attaining to the advanced age of eighty my prayer is 'Keep me from sin, wandering from God, unholy imaginations, restlessness feverishness over-anxiety to things of this life, that I may be Heavenly inclined, that I may grow in grace strong in the Lord doing the will of my Father who is in Heaven'.

A long life of activity and usefulness is ended. Without pain or suffering he passed away. The earthly dwelling place of the soul has been dissolved, the soul has entered the building of God, the house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. It occupies a mansion in the 'Father's house'. Jesus tells us, 'If I go and prepare a place for you, I will be again receive you unto myself, that where I am, there ye may also'. Our brother is at rest. He has joined the redeemed with Christ in the 'better land'. In that land there are no blind eyes, no deaf ears. There sorrow and death are no more. He now beholds the face of the Lord. He enjoys the fellowship of kindred spirits and loved ones gone before him to the Heavenly home. He has received his reward. His joy is now full.

Memories Of Marcellus

This week I will tell you about the jails we had to put the drunks in to sober up. One was in back of the Marcellus Supply and back of the picture show building. It was about 10 x 12 feet made of stone and had an iron bar door and window in the back up in the gable with iron bars. Our constable at that time in the 1890's was John Dunlap a large powerful man with large hands. When he got hold of a drunken man he went where Dunlap wished to take him either to the Justice, who was John Seymour, or put him in the stone jail. Later on the jail was torn down. Later the Village built in the firehouse two cells made of steel bars, had a cot in each one. Later the village took them out as we don't have any need for them now, as the Sheriff takes them to the county jail.

We don't seem to have the drunken fights as we used to have, seems so we had them every Saturday night. They were real knockdown and drag out. I would write about the differences in the drinking habits as they were in the 90's and before and what it compared with the time as they are now. I will tell you my opinion as I see it then and now. Let me know if you wish me to.
